States to Vote on Prohi Repealer

Indications That Necessary 36 Will Act Before End of the Year

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Citizens of 36 states will vote within the next few months to register their views on the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment, enough to make it the law of the land, if ratification is ratified by the necessary three-fourths of the states.

Indications today were that the 36 states may act before the end of the year.

Two states—Michigan and Wisconsin—have voted overwhelmingly to wipe the amendment from the constitution. Two more, New York and Delaware will cast their votes between now and November.

Anti-prohibition leaders, headed by Robert Bilsone, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, have expressed confidence of victory in each of these states, while Dr. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, points to the election of delegates in Indiana, June 6, as the first real battleground where a "decisive fight" will be made.

If Indiana rejects the repeal proposal, McBride said, "the Eighteenth amendment will remain in the constitution, plus."

Bilsone said today, "We are confident that by the end of the month the important initial processes of repeal will have been undertaken in almost three-fourth of the necessary 36 states."

Citing the possibility of action in 36 states this year, Bilsone said, "we do not concede the loss of a single state."

Design for Flowers

By HELEN WELSHIMER

DEDDLING men are strolling by Calling daffodils,
Spring has come and potted plants
Sit on window sills;
I am sure they'd rather climb
Up the clean, bright air
From a colored flower bed
Than a beige somewhere.

DAFFODILS and hyacinths
Too intend to bloom
Need cool winds and cleansing rains
And some stretching room.
How can any flower bed
Hold a gay head up
When it gets its daily drink
From a water cup?

"I cannot really enjoy anything," said the young woman, "because I have a sort of fear of terror behind it."

"Most of us have a certain heaviness of heart we can't shake off," I replied.

"I don't know ho wother people are, I've often wondered," she said. "I hope everyone isn't like me. Ever since I was a little girl I have had a dread of something. I can't tell what it is. Maybe I'm what they call a moral coward. Perhaps I can't face life. But really I never enjoy anything. No matter how happy I ought to be—no matter what's going on, a party, or new clothes or—or spring. I have a heavy heart. I know I am abnormal for some reason or other!"

Here or Common?

I had my doubts about that and said so. Is she really abnormal, this unhappy young person who cannot seem to find contentment or joy in anything she does? On the contrary, if the truth were known, I believe she is more common than uncommon. I believe there are thousands of adults and children who cannot shake off this feeling of dread, or heaviness, no matter what happens.

Psychologists tell us that it is a hangover from those sons when man lived in constant terror of his life. Perhaps. But do all wild animals live with dread in their hearts? Aren't the forest birds happy even when they sing. Is there always the shadow of the imaginary hawk or eagle over their their lives?

Shocks of Childhood

I cannot think so. Weariness and sudden alarm cannot be classed with this utter terror of living. They are different things altogether.

Again it may be caused by extreme ego, where introspection is daily habit and the world rotates around self. Usually the introvert is not happy. Any sensitive soul can never forget himself and ever imagines trouble—he really jumps ahead to seize it and bring it to his heart.

But I cannot believe this is the answer either. I believe it lies outside of either personality or heredity. I believe it is the result of a succession of shocks in early childhood.

It is fear in its most eerible form.

Books tell us that we are born with certain indescribable fears including that of death.

Don't Frighten Children

It proves no point particularly concerning these terror-ridden people. It is hardly conceivable that some would be bends and strains! Guaranteed. And SAMSONBAK is Sanforized. It won't shrink—ever. How Milton Lost Eyesight Recalled

One Eye Began Failing at 33—He Was Blind at Age of 46

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

The great poet, Milton, writer of "Paradise Lost," was blind during much of his lifetime. This blindness is, no doubt, associated largely with the nature of his writings and with his philosophy of life. There have been many considerations of the character of his blindness, and this moved Dr. William H. Wilmer of the great ophthalmologic institue which bears his name to make an analysis of published writings concerning reasons for the loss of Milton's sight.

The father of John Milton died at 84 years of age, and read without glasses all his life. His mother died at 65, and it was reported that she had week eyes and uses spectacles after she was 30 years old. In his early youth the boy suffered from digestive disturbances and later in life from gout.

His eyes were naturally weak and he suffered from headaches. From his twelfth year on he abused his eyesight, reading until midnight with the type of artificial light that was available in the beginning of the 17th century. This overuse of his eyes continued as long as Milton could see manuscript.

The poet was born in 1608. About 1641, when he was 33 years of age, he began to have trouble with his left eye. The sight grew steadily worse and 10 years later that eye was entirely blind. A few years after the onset of the disease in the left eye, the right eye became affected, and by 1654 that eye admitted only a tiny speck of light.

In available letters it appears that there was use of the eyes, but gradual failure of vision. He had all the usual symptoms of dancing objects before the eyes, occasional flashes of light and similar disturbances.

There have been many suggestions as to the reasons for Milton's loss of sight. It is not likely that it was due to detachment of the retina, because that comes on suddenly, and is, as Dr. Wilmer says, accompanied by a feeling that a black curtain has suddenly dropped before the eye. Occasionally there are fireworks, such as flashes of vivid light and floating colored disks before the eye, and Milton makes no record of such symptoms day and night.

Except for his failing vision, indigestion and gout, Milton seems to have had good general health. It is possible that he suffered with a tendency to nearsightedness. Both his father and mother were nearsighted. Milton, as a boy, may have been associated with inflammation of the lens and with eyestrain from reading, perhaps also with uncorrected errors of vision.

It seems hardly likely that he suffered from cataract, because it does not accord with the general history of his case and there is no record that any of his friends observed a grayness of the pupils of his eyes.

Dr. Wilmer is inclined to believe that Milton sufered with nearsightedness complicated by glaucoma. Glaucoma is the cause of one per cent of disturbances of the eyes. It occurs at all ages, increasing with every decade of life after 30. In this condition, there is a tendency to increased pressure within the eye due to interference with the mechanism of drainage of fluid from the eye. The fact that Milton had gout would seem to predispose toward glaucoma, and certainly the overuse of his eyes might have been a factor.

Surface Work Is Started on No. 2

Highway Dept. Pulverizing Bad Asphalt and Tamping It Down

EL DORADO, Ark.—Resurfacing operations on Highway No. 2 between El Dorado and Texarkana have been started by state engineers and the entire road is expected to be in excellent condition within six weeks, according to Frank H. Burnside, district engineer of Hope.

The asphalt-topped highway has been in bad condition for more than a year and heavy traffic and lack of maintenance have developed huge holes in the surface of the important southwest Arkansas highway.

The asphalt surface is being scarified and shoulders rebuilt wherever necessary. Work was started west started west fro the Union-Columbia county line where the highway joins the concrete paving 15 miles west of El Dorado. The workers will move on to Bodcaw, while another crew will begin work at Lewisville and move east some time next week.

A large tractor, a grader and a scarifier are pulverizing the asphalt which will be bound back into a hard surface by traffic. Mr. Burnside stated that after the finely-crushed asphalt is tamped back into shape, the surface will be as good or better than when a good gravel highway. He said no more asphalt will be laid on the highway at present.

—Editorial By Alex. H. Washburn—

JOSEPH V. M'KEE, Scottsman who succeeded "Jimmy" Walker as mayor of New York when it got tired of a clown and wanted a real man, has quit politics for a banking job. McKee's parting shot at politics is that it is "disgusting."

The people of the City of New York had great faith in McKee. Inspired by a newspaper campaign hundreds of thousands of voters wrote his name in on the ballot.

But he didn't win. O'Brien, a judge, had the support of Tammany Hall—and today O'Brien is mayor.

McKee's verdict on politics will be echoed by millions of fellow Americans. But he stands head and shoulders above them—he speaks from experience, not theory.

There is nothing alarming in this verdict from a man who has given as many years of his life to public service as McKee has.

What is alarming is the number of Americans who echo McKee, yet are too proud to run for office, and too lazy to vote for or against those who do.

I honor McKee, whatever he thinks. But I despise the high-hat, sniff-sniff chorus-boys.

It looks like the United States government is going to teach Dr. A. B. (To-Hell-With-the-Constitution) Anginton some respect for the constitution after all.

Governor Futrell is advised Friday that with Abington's still prohibiting deficiency judgments now on the statute books, Arkansas may not be able to qualify for relief under the federal farm mortgage refuding plan.

Abington was going to do something in a hurry for the relief of debtors.

But the federal government, loaning new money for old, says it isn't coming into a state where the law threatens to saddle it with a loss.

Governor Futrell is deeply pained. He recalls he let the Abington bill become a law without his signature.

Something has to tie Cone to bring Arkansas under the provisions of federal relief. The last recourse now is the state supreme court, which will be prayed to deliver us from Dr. Abington's "relief" bill.

X X X

Talk about debts is always painful.

But what we are beginning to realize is that the right to get into debt by a debtor is equal to the right to get out again. It may scale down the payments, and lighten the interest—but it's a long way from "no pay, just the same.

It can't be any other way.

A debt is evidence of the personal liberty to make a loan. We can't escape the one without losing the other.

"The Store" Given Pulitizer Award

Tennessee Novelist, Newspaper Playwright, Are Winners

NEW YORK.—(AP)—A Tennessee novelist, two university professors, a newspaperman-turned-playwright, and an Illinois-Connecticut poet have won the $6,000 in Pulitzer prizes in letters for 1932.

The awards, as announced Thursday night at the annual dinner of the friends of the Princeton library, are:

For the best novel published during the year by an American author, $1,000, to T. S. Stribling for "The Store."

For the original American play, performed in New York, which shall best represent the educational value and power of the stage, $1,000, to "Both Your Houses" by Maxwell Anderson.

For the best book of the year upon the history of the United States, $2,000 to "Significance of Sections in American History" by Frederick J. Turner.

For the best American biography teaching patriotism and unselfish services to the people, illustrated by an eminent example, excluding as to obvious the names of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, $1,000, to "Grover Cleveland," by Allan Nevins.

For the best volume of verse published during the year by an American author, $1,000, to "Conquistador" by Archibald MacLeish.

Comptroller Hits Back at Humphrey for Audit Censure

He Recalls That Auditor Let Fake Warrants Go by Under Old Law, Too

FORGERIES IN 1931

Comptroller Says New Law Hasn't Changed Responsibility

LITTLE ROCK—Declaring that efforts to discredit an act intended to promote honesty and economy "will not register with the taxpayers," State Comptroller Griffin Smith issued a statement Thursday defending the 1933 pro-audit law against criticism of State Auditor J. Oscar Humphrey, who told newspaper men that forgeries discovered after a book of 25 voucher-warrants had been stolen from a safe in the penitentiary office at Tucker state prison farm resulted from the new system of handling vouchers and warrants.

Mr. Humphrey said he never had heard of a forged state warrant before the pre-audit law was passed.

"Under the old law all blank state warrants were kept in a safe in the auditor's office, but under the present law, the disbursing agent of each department and institution keeps the blank warrants," Mr. Humphrey said. "Instead of the state auditor being responsible for the warrants, the responsibility has been placed with a couple of ignorant disbursing agents which increases the opportunities for theft or misuse of the warrants."

Refreshes Auditor's Memory

Answering Mr. Humphrey's statement, Mr. Smith said responsibility is exactly where it was before the pre-audit law was passed and added that in 1931 "warrants were issued by the present state auditor and forged vouchers in the aggregate sum of $263.40 of which $262 still remain uncollected." The comptroller referred to state bonwy vouchers said to have been issued by a former district office. Some of the vouchers never were received but were intercepted by the state auditor on nine of the vouchers and the warrants were cashed at the state treasurer's office. A former employe of the Highway Department served a jail sentence in Memphis in connection with passing the forged vouchers in that city.

The Governor's Response.

Comptroller Smith's statement follows:

"The pre-audit act is blamed by Mr. Humphrey for a condition permitting forgeries of warrants. He says he got by having said that "instead of the state auditor being responsible for the warrants, the responsibility has been placed on a couple of hundred disbursing agents."

"Responsibility is exactly where it was before the pre-audit law was enacted. Then, as now, disbursing agents were not charged with the vouchers, and no record was kept with respect to quantity, or serial numbers. The good branch remains intact. The $156.78 which Mr. Humphrey had photographed, was the fourth presented, three of which passed back into circulation without even a memorandum.

"In 1931 there was no pre-audit law, but highway warrants Nos. 33305, 33312, 33799, 33791, 33792, 34041, 34703, 35462 and 37337 were issued by the present auditor on forged vouchers in the aggregate sum of $263.40, of which amount $262 still remains uncollected. Recovery was had on warrant No. 34041, in the sum of $50.50, on warrant No. 35469, in the sum of $40.40, and on warrant No. 37371, in the sum of $50.50, stealing $141.40. These transactions might be borne in mind when comparing merits and demmerits of the old and the new system."

McMath Child's Kidnaping Is Laid to Family Friend

Boston American Says High Society Friends Sought "Shakedown"

Business Associate of Father Offers to Become a Hostage

BOSTON, Mass.—(AP)—The Boston American says in a copyrighted story Friday that Margaret McMath, kidnaped from school in Harwichport last Tuesday, will be returned to her parents within 24 hours.

The American says that a person well known to the McMath family was the brains of the plot, intending to extort money from the child's wealthy grandparents in Detroit.

The men participating in the plot were rehearsed for three days before the kidnaping, the paper says.

No gangster or racketeer had any part in it, the paper declares.

Offers to Be Hostage

HARWICHPORT, Mass.—(AP)—William Lee, Harwichport shipbuilder, Thursday night told state police he would gladly give himself as hostage for the safe return of 10-year-old Margaret McMath.

A business associate of Neil McMath, father of the girl who was kidnaped Tuesday after being lured from her classroom, Lee made the offer to add more means of contact with the abductors.

A plea by the parents of the child that the state police withdraw from the case for 24 hours to give the kidnapers further leeway to negotiating with the McMath family was refused after Gen. Daniel Needham, state police chief, had conferred with Governor Ely.

President Flays Severe Price Cuts

Cut-Throat Competition Frowned on in C. of C. Address

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The government's ready assistance in any movement on the part of industry to rid itself of cut-throat competition was pledged Thursday night by President Roosevelt.

Addressing the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which for several days had argued the question of government-industry relations, the president called for a rising wage scale and asked leaders to be more concerned with restoring general prosperity than with fostering their own particular branch of industry alone.

"In almost every industry, an overwhelming majority of the units of the industry are wholly willing to work together to prevent over-production, to prevent unfair wages, to eliminate unfair competitive practices," he said. "In the past success in attaining these objectives has been prevented by a small minority of units in many industries. I can assure you that you will have the co-operation of your government in bringing these minorities to understand that their unfair practices are contrary to a sound public policy."

Judge's Evidence Is Kept a Secret

Not Known Whether He Revealed Names of His Attackers

LE MARS, Ia.—(AP)—An elderly judge told a military court Thursday how a mob of farmers dragged him from his court, threatened him with hanging, defected into the jail corridor and finally left him unconscious.

The four members of the court did not reveal whether Judge C. C. Bradley, 54, gave the names of the leaders of the farmers seeking to halt mortgage foreclosures.

After hearing Judge Bradley's story, the court divided into four units and continued hearing evidence on the riot a week ago at the O'Brien county courthouse.

Touching Sermon Given by Crimm

Evangelist Preaches on Story of Lazarus and the Rich Man

Evangelist B. B. Crimm left off his statements concerning bridge, ball games, shows, dances and poker games and preached a sermon at the tabernacle Thursday night that brought tears to his audience.

It was the most powerful and touching sermon thus far, as the evangelist poured forth the message of God's inevitable dealings with man.

Rev. Ellis Fuller, pastor of the Lake, the Rev. Mr. Crimm portrayed the story of Lazarus and the rich man.

Continuing he stated:

"Isn't it a strange thing how the rich man, when he got to hell, prayed for himself and then his brethren. He was too busy to go to prayer meeting when he was on earth, yes, he was just like some of you, you could think of everything to do but would not keep you away from prayer meeting. Now over there, it's too late to pull off a prayer meeting when you get to hell. Better get caught up with your prayering here, too late then. For every knee shall bow and every tongue confess' but the trouble is, some of you will do it when it's too late, just like the rich man."

"Away back in the distant past, God spoke and brought this world into being, and in three separate acts of creation He made the vegetable and animal kingdom, then He made man. I still believe in the Genesis story of Creation and you so called smart folks who have been trying to find the missing link between man and the animal kingdom, why don't you try and find the missing link between the animal and vegetable kingdom; it would be just as easy to find a half potato and a half possum as it would be to find a half man and a half monkey.

"The fact is if I was to believe in evolution at all, I would believe that monkeys came from those pseudo scientists and pin-headed professors who teach such bunk, rather than that they came from the monkey and that's pretty near blows the monkey up. Oh! you say, free thought; think all you have to but you have no right to get up in a pulpit or teach a Sunday School class supported by Christian fathers and mothers and try to destroy the faith of a Christian father and mother's boy in that father and mother's God. I'll go you one better: You have no right, in this Christian nation with tax supported schools, supported by Christian people, you have no right to try and destroy the faith of the Christian people's boys and girls. The anti-evolution law is a just law and ought to be enforced."

God made man and "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul," but man sinned and by his sin, brought sin and its curse upon all men, but thank God, 'In the fulness of time Christ Jesus our second Adam" came to deliver us from the curse of sin and to bring us back into our rightful relationship with God. We can live by faith in Jesus Christ forever or die

20 Killed and 200 Injured as Storms Strike in Alabama

Three Towns in Western Half Suffer Heaviest Loss of Life

TOLL IS CLIMBING

Two Dead in Wake of Talullah (La.) and Pine Bluff Twisters

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—Twenty persons were killed and more than 200 injured by a tornado that swept through three west central Alabama communities shortly before dawn Friday morning.

Helena, a mining village of 700, bore the brunt of the storm, with 13 dead and nearly 100 injured.

Other communities struck were: Demopolis and Centerville, 2 killed in each; Brent, 3 killed; and Adamsville, Union Grove and Coalmont, where a number were injured.

Other storms added to the toll of May cyclones in the South. Two were killed in the lower Mississipi valley Thursday, one at Tallulah, La., and one at Pine Bluff, Ark.

Storm at Eudora, Ark.

EUDORA, Ark.—A wind storm which struck here at 5:30 Thursday afternoon caused several thousand dollars damage. Many buildings and homes were uncofed. Damage also was reported from several nearby communities. No persons were reported injured.

Part of the Federal Compress Company warehouse was blown off, it is said, at the home of C. M. Wilson was demolished and several other houses on the Bonseff river road were destroyed. A garage in front of Muir's store was moved from its foundation and it was necessary to place supports around it to prevent its falling across the highway.

Cotton 8.54, Gain of $1.20 Per Bale

Steady Advance Friday on Third Week of Commodity Boom

July cotton made a new "high" Friday, closing at 8.54, an advance of 24 points or $1.20 a bale over the previous close.

The opening was strong, and a $1-a-bale advance was maintained most of the session, with the close steadily stronger.

This marks the close of the third consecutive week of rising cotton prices, since America's departure from the gold standard. The staple has risen from around 6 cents a pound to 8½.

Stocks Advance

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Despite heavy profit-taking, stocks closed mostly higher Friday in a turnover of about 5 million shares.

Extreme gains of $1 to more than $3 were reduced to a late wave of realizing. The list-ended generally strong after a moderate setback. Utilities and houses on the Bonseff river road were destroyed. A garage in front of Muir's store was moved from its foundation and it was necessary to place supports around it to prevent its falling across the highway.

Germany Asks Equality

GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—Germany officially raised the question of her right to equality in armaments both in fact and under the terms of the world disarmament conference Friday.

The German delegate introduced amendments to the British disarmament plan, which would provide the equivalent to serving notice that unless military planes and submarines are abolished, Germany will want them.

U. S. Plan Progressing

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—American efforts to prepare the way for the London economic conference next month were redoubled Thursday night in the face of reports from abroad which accentuated the difficulties involved.

Undersecretary William Phillips of the State Department said France in accepting and made three reservations, reserving the right to raise its tariffs to meet depreciation of currencies, stipulating that the truce shall not apply to tariff measures now before its Parliament and stating that its consent was conditional on acceptance of the proposal by the principal powers.

British Acceptance Conditional

Later word that Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in the House of Commons had announced Britain's conditional acceptance was received with some satisfaction at the State Department where the British "safeguards" were said to be similar to the French reservations.

Uncertainty abroad as to whether the dollar is to be depreciated was seen by officials here as having an apparent bearing on the desire of other countries to retain the power of raising their tariffs in event of such an occurence.

Italian support of the truce was looked for in the light of statements by Guido Jung, Mussolini's finance minister, who now is engaged in the international conversations here with the president and secretary of state. He emphasized his chief's desire for lowered trade barriers.

"Anti-Deficiency" Law of Arkansas Cuts Collateral

Land Bank Executive Says U. S. May Deal Arkansas "Out"

FUTRELL ALARMED

Abington's Bill Became Law Without Governor's Signature

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor Futrell was informed Friday by Oliver J. Lloyd, vice-president and secretary of the Federal Land Bank, St. Louis, that Arkansas' anti-deficiency judgment act of the 1933 legislature would prevent this state from benefitting under the farm mortgage relief program of President Roosevelt.

The governor was "something else to have to be done" about the act, which became a law without his signature.

He indicated a test suit might be prosecuted to have it declared invalid.

Lloyd was quoted by the governor as saying that the federal government would not lend money on mortgages where the anti-deficiency act might operate because the government is not subject to the state's statutes.

The president's farm relief program contemplates the refinancing of farm mortgages at lower rates of interest for longer maturities.

The anti-deficiency act, introduced in the senate by Abington, of course provides that complainants in foreclosure suits must prosecute their complaints that they will not be for more amount of the mortgage plus interest and it instructs chancellors to render a sale in accordance with the appraisement fixed by the agents of the mortgagee.

Ragon Is Regarded Certain for Judge

Harvey Parnell May Be Given Clerkship of U. S. District Court

LITTLE ROCK.—Any doubt that Congressman Heartsill Ragon will be renominated and elected would be squashed, federal judge for the Western district of Arkansas apparently has been removed by recent developments in Washington, and potential candidates to succeed him have started work upon what to be systematic, though as yet quiet, campaigns.

It is expected that the Arkansas senators, Joe T. Robinson and Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway, will join in a recommendation to President Roosevelt that the Fifth district congressman be appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Frank A. Youmans of Fort Smith.

This will place Democrats on the federal bench in both districts of Arkansas, and apparently the Republicans are destined within the next few years to lose all the jobs they have held for many years.

If the appointment should be made before the meeting of the State Central Committee, May 13, it is probable that the committee will decide whether to arrange for nomination of a candidate for Congress by a convention or primary. Otherwise, the field may be left open for Democrats to run by filing nomination petitions, such as independent candidates file to get their names on the ballot.

An early appointment of Mr. Ragon as judge would make it possible to elect his successor July 18, when the prohibition referendum will be held, coincident with special elections for chief justice of the Arkansas Supreme Court and several district and county offices in which vacancies already exist or have been filled temporarily subject to the special elections.

It is expected that several other important federal positions in Arkansas will be given Democrats should the federal judge is named. There has been considerable speculating as to the probability of former Gov. Harvey Parnell being appointed collector of internal revenue.

Bundy and Ramsey Tell of Convention

Hope Men Recount Broadway of America Tour for Rotarians

Sid Bundy and W. M. Ramsey, who with Guy Bernett represented Hope at the Broadway of America convention early this week at El Paso, Texas, recounted their adventures to the Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow.

The cities along the route turned out with their fire departments to greet the caravan, Mr. Bundy said; and a fine hospitality was evidenced everywhere. The official delegate, federal judge for the Western district of Arkansas apparently has been remiss in his duties of encouragement to Washington, and potential candidates to succeed him have started work upon what to be systematic, though as yet quiet, campaigns.

It is expected that the Arkansas senators, Jo

World Parley May Turn Tide

If anyone doubts the supreme importance of the forthcoming London conference on international finances and economic policies a disagreement, he has only to read the newspaper dispatches in the daily papers. If these do not convince him he is beyond persuasion.

Currently, we have a cable from Paris remarking that they scarce like the one that swept Europe just before the World War is gripping France, Germany and Italy. France has been rounding up spies along her German and Italian borders. Germany has been swooping down on secret French agents. Italy has been busy, too, with each arrest, tension and fear increase in each country.

Simultaneously, another cable from Paris reports that the United States and the principal European governments will look all hope of immediate progress from the conference," and adds that the situation will not grow easier until "the world-wide political tension lessens."

On the heels of this, Chancellor Hitler declares in Berchtesgaden that Germany no longer be treated as a power of the second rank—she must be recorganized as an equal partner"; and the National Alliance of German Army Officers issues a statement declaring that restoration of the Hohenzollerns is the only hope of the reconstructed Germany.

In all of these dispatches together and you have as gloomy a picture as any Jeremiah would care to look upon. Then, to make the bill complete, lump in with them the innumerable stories testifying to economic breakdown in this country—the stories of cities that cannot pay their school teachers, their firemen and their policemen, the stories of closed banks that cannot reopen, the stories of mounting breadlines, of sweat-shop wages scales and the like.

What you get, beyond argument, is a picture of a world in turmoil and distress.

One hope is that the London conference can straighten out world difficulties and get us back on the right path again.

The President's Wife

ONE of the reasons why Americans like Eleanor Roosevelt so much is that she seems to have a genius for doing the right thing at the right time.

Take, for instance, the recent White House visit of those hard-bitten New England fishing captains.

These skippers were escorted by the president's wife on a conducted tour of the White House—a thing which the country's snootiest society folk would give their right ears to attain, and which most of them angle for, fruitlessly, for months. The fishermen got it without asking for it.

It was a little thing, of course—but not, one ventures to believe, to the sea captains, or to Mrs. Roosevelt herself. And it is because the first lady is capable of making a spontaneous and graceful gesture of that kind that her fellow citizens are becoming so fond of her.

Senator Norris' Victory

SENATOR GEORGE W. NORRIS of Nebraska ought to be one of the proudest men in Washington these days.

The Muscle Shoals bill will be law within a very few days. The Senate and the House still have a few minor points to straighten out before they can send it to the White House, but its ultimate passage is assured, and it is equally certain that the president will sign it.

And the victory, more than anyone else's, is Senator Norris's.

The bill itself may be a very fine thing or it may be profoundly unwise; that, for the moment, is not the point. The point is that it was Senator Norris who kept the Shoals property intact, in Uncle Sam's hands, for long years, in the face of powerful opposition, and that it was Senator Norris who created a public sentiment favorable to government operation.

And now, as his long fight is being crowned with success, the Nebraska senator has a right to feel pretty good about everything.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MONNIE O'DARE, 20 and beautiful, is engaged to marry CARTER CARRIGAN who professes to be in love with her in fashion of his snobbish family. CHARLES LUNDQUIST, Monnie's friend from Belvedere, pays Monnie marked attention. He helps her with examinations, and when she tells him of her younger sister, tries to run out with her. Monnie's mother and Monnie bring her back with out scandal.

SANDRA LAWRENCE, onetime friend of Monnie's, tries to win Jim away from her. Sandra's maid, HETTY, thinks Sandra is trying to vamp JAMES, the chauffeur, and is jealous. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

MONNIE heard Kay's voice and looked up. It was Sunday morning—11 o'clock, to be exact—and Monnie was enjoying the sweet freedom of her "day off," celebrating it by the weekly washing of her burnished bronze hair. Sitting out under the apple tree in a shabby old basket chair, looking extraordinarily carefree in her white smock she wore, she answered her younger sister.

"Yes? What is it?"

Kay Cavanaugh chose the adventure. A curiously silent, obedient, almost pathetically-anxious-to-please Kay, Monnie reflected. It had been lucky—she had been really miserous—that no one else had learned of Kay's brief fight with Chester Bigelow, from which Charles Eustace and Monnie had providentially rescued her.

"Monnie, I want to do something!" Kay's voice, her expression were tragic. Her sea blue eyes, long lashed, shadowed faintly with mauve, stared straight ahead. "I've got to find something. I—I'll go crazy if I don't."

Monnie said mildly, "But there aren't any jobs for you in Belvedere—"

"I know," Kay interrupted. "That's exactly what I mean. If I could get away—to Chicago. Or New York—"

Her voice fell on the name. The magic name of The City. Kay, staring through apple-branches at the sky, was seeing, instead, the high minarets and towers publicized by the picture postcards—the famous "skyline." She was seeing the Empire State building and the Chrysler tower, the winking lights of Times Square.

"You'd be a chance for me there," Kay stated eagerly. "I could make something of myself—be somebody. Get some place."

Monnie sighed. They had gone over this ground before. She sympathized, wholly and utterly, but what could she do about it?

"You're too young to be on your own," she said with gentleness. "Even if we had the money to stake you for a while—which we haven't—you're far too young to go off that way by yourself. Mother would never hear of it."

"Girls not one bit older than I am," said Kay with forgiveness, "are earning scads of money in the movies."

"Yes, movies, of course," said Monnie, dismissing them.

"Well?" Kay seemed to think she had made a case.

"Yes, but for the half dozen who are successful," argued the older sister, "aren't there 50 who drop to starve? Turn on the gas—all kinds of things. You read about it every day."

"I," said Kay magnificently, "would be successful."

Monnie gave her a speculative look. "You might," she said slowly. "And then again you might not. It's not being pretty and talented alone that gets you over. I read just the other day that a good camera man could make an actress and an unfriendly one ruin her chances. There are tricks—why, some of the most successful ones are not a bit pretty if you meet them face to face! Don't you remember Lillias Martingale, the girl I told you I met at Sandra's last Easter? She was plain, really. Angular—and her skin was awful. But Sandra said she got a screen test that was wonderful. And she's getting along very well. I saw her picture outside the Cameo the other day when I came home."

"I forgot you'd met her," said Kay interested. "Was she really ugly?"

"Not ugly—but, well, plain in a distinguished kind of way. She," remembered Monnie, "was the girl Sandra met in Florence. From an old Boston family, I think."

Kay frowned. "Sandra, by the way, is throwing a big party tomorrow night. Having people from the city and the usual snooty crowd here. Wonder she wouldn't invite you! You used to be awfully chummy."

Monnie threw the bright veil of her hair over her eyes. "Don't be silly," she said with affected lightness. "You wouldn't expect me to be asked to every party Sandra gave."

"She might have done it this time anyway," Kay went on, stubbornly loyal. "I know her. What she wants is to get Dan Cardigan all to herself. She worked hard on that job. She deserves him. All I hope is," prattled Kay, turning the knife in her listener's heart with blissful unconsciousness, "is that she gets Mamma Cardigan with him! They'd be a fine pair. Both bosses. Neither one will give an inch."

"What makes you think," asked Monnie in a muffled voice, "that she's going to 'get' Dan, as you so elegantly put it?"

* * *

"WELL, I'll tell you," began Kay confidentially. "Mind you, Monnie, I wouldn't be talking this way if I weren't certain you'd get over Dan—and a mighty good thing that is, too," she interpolated. "Ever since that night you turned him down when he asked for a date I've been awfully glad. I was afraid," said Kay with sisterly candor, "you might be turning out to be the sort of dumb bunny who cries with joy when a boy shows her any attention. And that, with your looks, would be dumb!"

"Thanks." Monnie was brushing her hair now. It did not matter if her face had crimsoned.

"What I say," cried Kay warming to her subject, "is, let Sandra have him, and good riddance! Charles Eustace is a better bet any way you look at it."

"You're not insinuating," said Monnie, between tears and laughter, "that Charles is in love with me? Because I never heard such nonsense in my life."

Kay whistled like a boy. "Maybe not yet, but it's going to do it like a finger," she advised. "That's sheard. If there's anyone she's interested in that way, it's you. He's always talking about your looks and your livestories—"

Kay giggled. "Charles' fa? That's good." She seemed vastly amused.

"You talk as if he were Methuselah," said Monnie, nettled at the reception her bit of news received. "He's not yet 30."

"That's right, stick up for him," Kay told her. "He's O. K. I'm for Charles, with both feet. Only he's awful. But not for me. He's just not the—not the type. Even if he is a dream boy—even Ronald Colman and Gary Cooper."

"He's been everywhere, seen everything, knows everyone," Monnie said quickly, glad the talk had shifted from Dan to less dangerous ground.

"AND he's very, very rich," Kay added shrewdly. "Mr. Briggs was saying only the other day—when I was there at dinner—that his mother inherited scads from old Mr. Waterman and that his father was an eastern millionaire."

"Not a bit spoiled though," Monnie reflected, pretending to be rapt in her subject although, all the time, the thought of Dan was hammering at the back of her mind. So she was supposed to have relinquished him to Sandra, was she? Her fighting blood was stirred.

"What did you say?" She had been thinking of other things, her thoughts worlds away, but Kay was prattling on.

"I said she might have invited you, anyway." Kay was on the subject of the party again. Monnie frowned.

"I couldn't have gone," she said obliquely.

"Why not?"

"I have another engagement." She smiled at her sister's mystification.

"Monnie! Not a new beau!" Kay was all eyes.

A little later, pressing the deep, crisp waves into her still damp hair, frowning intently at her reflection in the mirror, she said to herself that Dan Cardigan should not go to Sandra's party to be flaunted as her prize possession.

There were things Sandra Lawrence had to learn. One of them was that she was not nearly so subtle as she thought herself. The other was that Dan Cardigan was not hers for the snapping of a finger.

She, Monnie O'Dare, knew better than that:

"You seem in good spirits," her mother said to her at the luncheon table.

"I am!" Monnie's bronze hair, capping her small head like a molded casque of metal, seemed fairly to crackle with vitality. Her eyes sparkled.

She would show Sandra Lawrence that she was a foe worthy of respect!

In each of us two souls there are,
And one is weak and one is strong;
And day by day along life's way
All men are torn 'twixt right and wrong;
Temptation is a subtle thing.
With varying lures it leads us on,
All roads it forces to set its snares,
But right must travel only one.
For money some do shameful things
Within the precincts of the law,
Oh, to secure a full and running purse
They'll fight for gain with tooth and claw.
Not all the failures to be fine
Are caused by open scarlet sin,
Men bitter grow, they cease to shine
And sometimes break their words to win.
The right must struggle 'gainst the odds,
Temptation strikes with subtle skill,
And if the conscience merely nods,
Man's lower nature works its will
In each of us two spirits dwell
And one is dark and one is fair,
And ever, Mrs Lafayette, we wot is right,
Or wrong will catch us unaware.
—E. A. G.

Mrs. Louis Johnson and Miss Mildred Jones of Texarkana were Thursday shoppers in the city.

Mrs. George Spraggins left Friday for a visit with her brother, Rev. James R. Green and Mrs. Green in Senatobia, Miss.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson have as week end guests, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cowden and children of Little Rock.

The regularly monthly meeting of the Pat Cleburne chapter, U. D. C. was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ben Green on North Hervey street, with Mrs. R. T. Wilson, Mrs. A. L. Black and Mrs. R. M. LaGrone as associate hostesses.

Beautiful spring flowers adorned the home of the McFaddin home, with varihued cornflowers adding their beauty to the reception hall, and in the dining room where there was a most interesting display of antiques and heirlooms, lovely pink roses shed their fragrance. Despite the rainy weather and the gloom of the outside, the spirit of spring prevailed. Mrs. W. E. Briant opened the meeting with a full and running roll call of members and a number of visitors. Following the ritual, and the singing of the chapter hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," reports were given from the various committees, the chapter endorsed the play ground project that is being sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary and voted a sum donation to assist in defraying the expenses of a supervisor. At this time Mrs. Briant announced the program and nominating committees for the year's work. It was also decided that the chapter have a picnic on the date of the June meeting, inviting the Texarkana and Fulton chapters and the citizens of Washington to join the Pat Cleburne chapter in the picnic. Mrs. Briant announced a resume of business and events during her administration. Mrs. Meggie Bell gave an interesting program with a most instructive and entertain history of the chapter since it's founding. Mrs. and first president, Mrs. C. A. Forney-Smith, each president following in regular order. Mrs. Edgar Briant closing the program with a sketch of Mrs. Forney-Smith, the founder. In office, bringing the history up to date. These valuable papers will be preserved by the Pat Cleburne Chapter—as a matter of historical data. Preceding the program Miss Bettie Mellen, violinist, accompanied by Mrs. Robert Campbell delighted the meeting with two beautiful selections on the violin. Another musical feature was the singing of "Arkansas" by the chapter. During the social hour the hostesses assisted by little Misses Mary Ross and Matilda Fulton served a delightful ice course with angel food cake. Many interesting events were enjoyed, the meeting adjourned to the dining room, where a most interesting display of handwork and antiques was viewed, with prizes going to Mrs. A. L. Black, Mrs. R. H. Lipscomb, Mrs. E. F. McFaddin and Mrs. M. M. Smyth. Guests for the afternoon were Mrs. Ben Green, Mrs. Robert Campbell, Miss Helen McRae, Mrs. Frank Ward and Mrs. Sid Henry.

Honoring Mrs. W. E. Johnson of Fulton, who will leave shortly for her new home in Little Rock, Mrs. L. W. Young entertained at a delightful spring luncheon at 1 o'clock Wednesday at her home on South Hervey street, the rooms, and the perfectly appointed luncheon table were centered with a blue crystal bowl filled to overflowing with two shades of blue cornflowers. A most tempting three course luncheon was served. Sharing this delightful hospitality with the honoree were Mrs. W. G. Allison, Mrs. John P. Cox, Mrs. E. J. McCabe, Mrs. Kline Snyder, Mrs. George Ware, Mrs. George Robison, Mrs. B. V. Hermon, Mrs. Tully Henry, Mrs. E. P. Stuart, Mrs. Max Cox. Miss Johnson was presented with a dainty gift of remembrance.

Kansas Jury Holds 3.2 Pct. Beer Legal

WICHITA, Kan.—A district court jury held that 3.2 beer is legal in Kansas.

The jury, hearing the case of Robert Arnold, charged with possession and sale of intoxicating liquor, held that beer was non-intoxicating and therefore not in conflict with the state dry laws.

Arnold was arrested in a pre-arranged test case. Andrews said he would continue to sell the beer.

Dr. Fishbein Reviews Effect of New Caller-Cope-lan Law

By Dr. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Med. Ass'n, and Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Now that the Caller-Copeland medicinal liquor bill is effective, physicians soon will be free to prescribe for their patients whatever amount of alcoholic liquor is necessary. Formerly, arbitrary limits on quantity, on the alcoholic content of vinous liquors, and the number of prescriptions that might be issued, are replaced by the stipulation that "no more liquor shall be prescribed to any person than is necessary to supply his medicinal needs."

The judgment of the attending physician is to be supreme, within the limits of essential professional practice, and subject only to certain regulations now being drawn under terms of the law by the attorney general and the secretary of the treasury.

These regulations will set forth the maximum quantity of liquor that may be prescribed at any one time, as well as the normal frequency of prescribing. The object is to prevent abuses that might arise if physicians should prescribe quantities of liquor sufficient for long periods. Anyone who misrepresents to obtain a greater supply than is needed is subject to fine and imprisonment.

Physicians will not be required to file in any government office records of the amount of liquor which their patients are suffering, as at present, but will be required to keep such records in their offices.

The prescription of alcoholic liquors is still not permitted in several states, and numerous physicians in other states have refused to take out permits. Many physicians find the prescription privilege an annoyance. These are indications that the right to prescribe liquor never has been an unmixed blessing.

Alcohol in the treatment of disease may be beneficial, useless or harmful, according to the manner in which it is used, and according to the type of case in which it is prescribed. Dr. Humphrey Rolleston has said that its main value is in an emergency, and as a temporary remedy for diminishing and occasionally to induce sleep.

Dr. Roger I. Lee has spoken of its relief as the condition of a state of artificial euphoria, or feeling of well-being.

An elderly person, for example, is convalescing from a mild cold, or pneumonia, for instance. He is told that he may have a little whisky. Where the person in good health is unaware of any feeling functions, the old person who is recovering from a minor illness is conscious of many dizzy disturbances. He is told he is depressed and miserable in mind and body, he has no appetite and does not care about things.

True, such a person may be greatly improved by the administration of a small amount of alcohol, but a small dose of alcohol in a sick person often gives him a different outlook on life.

His miseries concern him less. He is likely to be improved by the opportunity to hove in his body the will toward recovery, rather than the lackadaisical attitude mentioned.

New Eddie Cantor Film Here Sunday

Jean Calloway's Orchestra at Saenger for 3 Shows Saturday

"The Kid From Spain" with Eddie Cantor is the pop-eyed matador for laughs and a hundred dark-eyed senoritas for further excitement in a fiesta tale of Mexican bull-fighting and love-making comes to the Saenger Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Eddie Cantor and Lyda Roberti in "The Kid from Spain"

Every year a new sensation rises out of the thousands of actors who appear before the millions of unseen audiences, and this season Blase New York with the symbol Jubilation has proclaimed another Californ in the person of "Jean."

Jean Calloway has surrounded herself with thirteen of the most nationally known musicians' artists, brought together from practically every part of this vast country, and is today proving to be an absolute sensation.

The management of the Saenger has been forced to guarantee the Famous Orchestra Corporation of New York City, who are sponsoring the tour of this marvelous artist, a tremendous sum of money to make it possible for the patrons of this vicinity to be able to be entertained at the Saenger for three shows only Saturday.

Church Dismisses Mission Writer

Pearl Buck Going Back to China After Presbyterian Fight

NEW YORK.—Pearl Buck is going back to China next month with her husband, still the artist untouched by ballyhoo and bickering.

Although she has been forced to resign as a missionary because of her literary views, she has preserved her philosophical calm, which she acquired in the Eastern world.

As soon as news of her break with the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions was published, through her publishers, she sent a message that she has retracted nothing as to her beliefs, her writings or speeches—and that she will go about her business in China as usual.

"For some time," said Richard Walsh, president of the John Day Company, publishers, "Mrs. Buck has regarded herself as a novelist, not a missionary second. She was an unpaid missionary, in the first place. She taught English in China, but two or three years ago, she droped that work, too.

"This resignation will make no difference in her life in China. It is just a formality, that's all."

Pearl Buck remains high on enigma to the American public that applauded her "The Good Earth." She never has given her opinions on marriage, divorce, the younger generation and prohibition.

She wrote Mr. Walsh:

"I would like to be known not for myself, but for my books. The Chinese are very sensitive people. They take the artist as important only because of his art, are not interested in the personality of the artist."

Her devotion to the Chinese people still is the guiding interest of her life's work, she has said.

Dr. Macher Roused

PHILADELPHIA.—The Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church Tuesday was severely criticized for its failure to condemn Mrs. Pearl S. Buck in accepting her resignation as a missionary, in a statement by the Rev. Dr. J. Gresham Machen, fundamentalist chairman of the faculty of the Westminster Theological School.

"The action of the board indicated that it is quite unworthy of the confidence of the Presbyterian Church," the statement said.

Referendum Move Due Before June 8

Battle for Signatures on Petition Now Under Way in State

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Formal notice was given by the Arkansas Corporation Commission Friday that Act 280 of the 1933 legislature—amending the period for redemption of tax-forfeited lands to four years and reducing the penalty to 2 per cent—would become effective June 8 unless petitions containing the required number of signatures for a referendum on the act are filed with the secretary of state by that time.

If petitions bearing approximately 13,000 signatures of qualified electors now in circulation throughout the state, are filed by June 8, the operation of the act will be stayed and it will be voted upon at the 1934 general election.

World Parley May Turn Tide

If anyone doubts the supreme importance of the forthcoming London conference on international finances and economic policies a disagreement, he has only to read the newspaper dispatches in the daily papers. If these do not convince him he is beyond persuasion.

Currently, we have a cable from Paris remarking that they scarce like the one that swept Europe just before the World War is gripping France, Germany and Italy. France has been rounding up spies along her German and Italian borders. Germany has been swooping down on secret French agents. Italy has been busy, too, with each arrest, tension and fear increase in each country.

Simultaneously, another cable from Paris reports that the United States and the principal European governments will look all hope of immediate progress from the conference," and adds that the situation will not grow easier until "the world-wide political tension lessens."

On the heels of this, Chancellor Hitler declares in Berchtesgaden that Germany no longer be treated as a power of the second rank—she must be recorganized as an equal partner"; and the National Alliance of German Army Officers issues a statement declaring that restoration of the Hohenzollerns is the only hope of the reconstructed Germany.

In all of these dispatches together and you have as gloomy a picture as any Jeremiah would care to look upon. Then, to make the bill complete, lump in with them the innumerable stories testifying to economic breakdown in this country—the stories of cities that cannot pay their school teachers, their firemen and their policemen, the stories of closed banks that cannot reopen, the stories of mounting breadlines, of sweat-shop wages scales and the like.

What you get, beyond argument, is a picture of a world in turmoil and distress.

One hope is that the London conference can straighten out world difficulties and get us back on the right path again.

The President's Wife

ONE of the reasons why Americans like Eleanor Roosevelt so much is that she seems to have a genius for doing the right thing at the right time.

Take, for instance, the recent White House visit of those hard-bitten New England fishing captains.

These skippers were escorted by the president's wife on a conducted tour of the White House—a thing which the country's snootiest society folk would give their right ears to attain, and which most of them angle for, fruitlessly, for months. The fishermen got it without asking for it.

It was a little thing, of course—but not, one ventures to believe, to the sea captains, or to Mrs. Roosevelt herself. And it is because the first lady is capable of making a spontaneous and graceful gesture of that kind that her fellow citizens are becoming so fond of her.

Senator Norris' Victory

SENATOR GEORGE W. NORRIS of Nebraska ought to be one of the proudest men in Washington these days.

The Muscle Shoals bill will be law within a very few days. The Senate and the House still have a few minor points to straighten out before they can send it to the White House, but its ultimate passage is assured, and it is equally certain that the president will sign it.

And the victory, more than anyone else's, is Senator Norris's.

The bill itself may be a very fine thing or it may be profoundly unwise; that, for the moment, is not the point. The point is that it was Senator Norris who kept the Shoals property intact, in Uncle Sam's hands, for long years, in the face of powerful opposition, and that it was Senator Norris who created a public sentiment favorable to government operation.

And now, as his long fight is being crowned with success, the Nebraska senator has a right to feel pretty good about everything.

So They Say!

Experience has shown how difficult it is to direct discussion at international conferences into practical channels of definite accord.—James A. Farrell, chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council.

A real hair cutter is an artist. He doesn't merely cut hair, he sculptures the head.—A. N. Naso, president Ohio Hairdressers Association.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MONNIE O'DARE, 20 and beautiful, is engaged to marry CARTER CARRIGAN who professes to be in love with her in fashion of his snobbish family. CHARLES LUNDQUIST, Monnie's friend from Belvedere, pays Monnie marked attention. He helps her with examinations, and when she tells him of her younger sister, tries to run out with her. Monnie's mother and Monnie bring her back with out scandal.

SANDRA LAWRENCE, onetime friend of Monnie's, tries to win Jim away from her. Sandra's maid, HETTY, thinks Sandra is trying to vamp JAMES, the chauffeur, and is jealous. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

MONNIE heard Kay's voice and looked up. It was Sunday morning—11 o'clock, to be exact—and Monnie was enjoying the sweet freedom of her "day off," celebrating it by the weekly washing of her burnished bronze hair. Sitting out under the apple tree in a shabby old basket chair, looking extraordinarily carefree in her white smock she wore, she answered her younger sister.

"Yes? What is it?"

Kay Cavanaugh chose the adventure. A curiously silent, obedient, almost pathetically-anxious-to-please Kay, Monnie reflected. It had been lucky—she had been really miserous—that no one else had learned of Kay's brief fight with Chester Bigelow, from which Charles Eustace and Monnie had providentially rescued her.

"Monnie, I want to do something!" Kay's voice, her expression were tragic. Her sea blue eyes, long lashed, shadowed faintly with mauve, stared straight ahead. "I've got to find something. I—I'll go crazy if I don't."

Monnie said mildly, "But there aren't any jobs for you in Belvedere—"

"I know," Kay interrupted. "That's exactly what I mean. If I could get away—to Chicago. Or New York—"

Her voice fell on the name. The magic name of The City. Kay, staring through apple-branches at the sky, was seeing, instead, the high minarets and towers publicized by the picture postcards—the famous "skyline." She was seeing the Empire State building and the Chrysler tower, the winking lights of Times Square.

"You'd be a chance for me there," Kay stated eagerly. "I could make something of myself—be somebody. Get some place."

Monnie sighed. They had gone over this ground before. She sympathized, wholly and utterly, but what could she do about it?

"You're too young to be on your own," she said with gentleness. "Even if we had the money to stake you for a while—which we haven't—you're far too young to go off that way by yourself. Mother would never hear of it."

"Girls not one bit older than I am," said Kay with forgiveness, "are earning scads of money in the movies."

"Yes, movies, of course," said Monnie, dismissing them.

"Well?" Kay seemed to think she had made a case.

"Yes, but for the half dozen who are successful," argued the older sister, "aren't there 50 who drop to starve? Turn on the gas—all kinds of things. You read about it every day."

"I," said Kay magnificently, "would be successful."

Monnie gave her a speculative look. "You might," she said slowly. "And then again you might not. It's not being pretty and talented alone that gets you over. I read just the other day that a good camera man could make an actress and an unfriendly one ruin her chances. There are tricks—why, some of the most successful ones are not a bit pretty if you meet them face to face! Don't you remember Lillias Martingale, the girl I told you I met at Sandra's last Easter? She was plain, really. Angular—and her skin was awful. But Sandra said she got a screen test that was wonderful. And she's getting along very well. I saw her picture outside the Cameo the other day when I came home."

"I forgot you'd met her," said Kay interested. "Was she really ugly?"

"Not ugly—but, well, plain in a distinguished kind of way. She," remembered Monnie, "was the girl Sandra met in Florence. From an old Boston family, I think."

Kay frowned. "Sandra, by the way, is throwing a big party tomorrow night. Having people from the city and the usual snooty crowd here. Wonder she wouldn't invite you! You used to be awfully chummy."

Monnie threw the bright veil of her hair over her eyes. "Don't be silly," she said with affected lightness. "You wouldn't expect me to be asked to every party Sandra gave."

"She might have done it this time anyway," Kay went on, stubbornly loyal. "I know her. What she wants is to get Dan Cardigan all to herself. She worked hard on that job. She deserves him. All I hope is," prattled Kay, turning the knife in her listener's heart with blissful unconsciousness, "is that she gets Mamma Cardigan with him! They'd be a fine pair. Both bosses. Neither one will give an inch."

"What makes you think," asked Monnie in a muffled voice, "that she's going to 'get' Dan, as you so elegantly put it?"

* * *

"WELL, I'll tell you," began Kay confidentially. "Mind you, Monnie, I wouldn't be talking this way if I weren't certain you'd get over Dan—and a mighty good thing that is, too," she interpolated. "Ever since that night you turned him down when he asked for a date I've been awfully glad. I was afraid," said Kay with sisterly candor, "you might be turning out to be the sort of dumb bunny who cries with joy when a boy shows her any attention. And that, with your looks, would be dumb!"

"Thanks." Monnie was brushing her hair now. It did not matter if her face had crimsoned.

"What I say," cried Kay warming to her subject, "is, let Sandra have him, and good riddance! Charles Eustace is a better bet any way you look at it."

"You're not insinuating," said Monnie, between tears and laughter, "that Charles is in love with me? Because I never heard such nonsense in my life."

Kay whistled like a boy. "Maybe not yet, but it's going to do it like a finger," she advised. "That's sheard. If there's anyone she's interested in that way, it's you. He's always talking about your looks and your livestories—"

Kay giggled. "Charles' fa? That's good." She seemed vastly amused.

"You talk as if he were Methuselah," said Monnie, nettled at the reception her bit of news received. "He's not yet 30."

"That's right, stick up for him," Kay told her. "He's O. K. I'm for Charles, with both feet. Only he's awful. But not for me. He's just not the—not the type. Even if he is a dream boy—even Ronald Colman and Gary Cooper."

"He's been everywhere, seen everything, knows everyone," Monnie said quickly, glad the talk had shifted from Dan to less dangerous ground.

"AND he's very, very rich," Kay added shrewdly. "Mr. Briggs was saying only the other day—when I was there at dinner—that his mother inherited scads from old Mr. Waterman and that his father was an eastern millionaire."

"Not a bit spoiled though," Monnie reflected, pretending to be rapt in her subject although, all the time, the thought of Dan was hammering at the back of her mind. So she was supposed to have relinquished him to Sandra, was she? Her fighting blood was stirred.

"What did you say?" She had been thinking of other things, her thoughts worlds away, but Kay was prattling on.

"I said she might have invited you, anyway." Kay was on the subject of the party again. Monnie frowned.

"I couldn't have gone," she said obliquely.

"Why not?"

"I have another engagement." She smiled at her sister's mystification.

"Monnie! Not a new beau!" Kay was all eyes.

A little later, pressing the deep, crisp waves into her still damp hair, frowning intently at her reflection in the mirror, she said to herself that Dan Cardigan should not go to Sandra's party to be flaunted as her prize possession.

There were things Sandra Lawrence had to learn. One of them was that she was not nearly so subtle as she thought herself. The other was that Dan Cardigan was not hers for the snapping of a finger.

She, Monnie O'Dare, knew better than that:

"You seem in good spirits," her mother said to her at the luncheon table.

"I am!" Monnie's bronze hair, capping her small head like a molded casque of metal, seemed fairly to crackle with vitality. Her eyes sparkled.

She would show Sandra Lawrence that she was a foe worthy of respect!

In each of us two souls there are,
And one is weak and one is strong;
And day by day along life's way
All men are torn 'twixt right and wrong;
Temptation is a subtle thing.
With varying lures it leads us on,
All roads it forces to set its snares,
But right must travel only one.
For money some do shameful things
Within the precincts of the law,
Oh, to secure a full and running purse
They'll fight for gain with tooth and claw.
Not all the failures to be fine
Are caused by open scarlet sin,
Men bitter grow, they cease to shine
And sometimes break their words to win.
The right must struggle 'gainst the odds,
Temptation strikes with subtle skill,
And if the conscience merely nods,
Man's lower nature works its will
In each of us two spirits dwell
And one is dark and one is fair,
And ever, Mrs Lafayette, we wot is right,
Or wrong will catch us unaware.
—E. A. G.

Mrs. Louis Johnson and Miss Mildred Jones of Texarkana were Thursday shoppers in the city.

Mrs. George Spraggins left Friday for a visit with her brother, Rev. James R. Green and Mrs. Green in Senatobia, Miss.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson have as week end guests, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cowden and children of Little Rock.

The regularly monthly meeting of the Pat Cleburne chapter, U. D. C. was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ben Green on North Hervey street, with Mrs. R. T. Wilson, Mrs. A. L. Black and Mrs. R. M. LaGrone as associate hostesses.

Beautiful spring flowers adorned the home of the McFaddin home, with varihued cornflowers adding their beauty to the reception hall, and in the dining room where there was a most interesting display of antiques and heirlooms, lovely pink roses shed their fragrance. Despite the rainy weather and the gloom of the outside, the spirit of spring prevailed. Mrs. W. E. Briant opened the meeting with a full and running roll call of members and a number of visitors. Following the ritual, and the singing of the chapter hymn, "How Firm a Foundation," reports were given from the various committees, the chapter endorsed the play ground project that is being sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary and voted a sum donation to assist in defraying the expenses of a supervisor. At this time Mrs. Briant announced the program and nominating committees for the year's work. It was also decided that the chapter have a picnic on the date of the June meeting, inviting the Texarkana and Fulton chapters and the citizens of Washington to join the Pat Cleburne chapter in the picnic. Mrs. Briant announced a resume of business and events during her administration. Mrs. Meggie Bell gave an interesting program with a most instructive and entertain history of the chapter since it's founding. Mrs. and first president, Mrs. C. A. Forney-Smith, each president following in regular order. Mrs. Edgar Briant closing the program with a sketch of Mrs. Forney-Smith, the founder. In office, bringing the history up to date. These valuable papers will be preserved by the Pat Cleburne Chapter—as a matter of historical data. Preceding the program Miss Bettie Mellen, violinist, accompanied by Mrs. Robert Campbell delighted the meeting with two beautiful selections on the violin. Another musical feature was the singing of "Arkansas" by the chapter. During the social hour the hostesses assisted by little Misses Mary Ross and Matilda Fulton served a delightful ice course with angel food cake. Many interesting events were enjoyed, the meeting adjourned to the dining room, where a most interesting display of handwork and antiques was viewed, with prizes going to Mrs. A. L. Black, Mrs. R. H. Lipscomb, Mrs. E. F. McFaddin and Mrs. M. M. Smyth. Guests for the afternoon were Mrs. Ben Green, Mrs. Robert Campbell, Miss Helen McRae, Mrs. Frank Ward and Mrs. Sid Henry.

Honoring Mrs. W. E. Johnson of Fulton, who will leave shortly for her new home in Little Rock, Mrs. L. W. Young entertained at a delightful spring luncheon at 1 o'clock Wednesday at her home on South Hervey street, the rooms, and the perfectly appointed luncheon table were centered with a blue crystal bowl filled to overflowing with two shades of blue cornflowers. A most tempting three course luncheon was served. Sharing this delightful hospitality with the honoree were Mrs. W. G. Allison, Mrs. John P. Cox, Mrs. E. J. McCabe, Mrs. Kline Snyder, Mrs. George Ware, Mrs. George Robison, Mrs. B. V. Hermon, Mrs. Tully Henry, Mrs. E. P. Stuart, Mrs. Max Cox. Miss Johnson was presented with a dainty gift of remembrance.

Kansas Jury Holds 3.2 Pct. Beer Legal

WICHITA, Kan.—A district court jury held that 3.2 beer is legal in Kansas.

The jury, hearing the case of Robert Arnold, charged with possession and sale of intoxicating liquor, held that beer was non-intoxicating and therefore not in conflict with the state dry laws.

Arnold was arrested in a pre-arranged test case. Andrews said he would continue to sell the beer.

Dr. Fishbein Reviews Effect of New Caller-Cope-lan Law

By Dr. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Med. Ass'n, and Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Now that the Caller-Copeland medicinal liquor bill is effective, physicians soon will be free to prescribe for their patients whatever amount of alcoholic liquor is necessary. Formerly, arbitrary limits on quantity, on the alcoholic content of vinous liquors, and the number of prescriptions that might be issued, are replaced by the stipulation that "no more liquor shall be prescribed to any person than is necessary to supply his medicinal needs."

The judgment of the attending physician is to be supreme, within the limits of essential professional practice, and subject only to certain regulations now being drawn under terms of the law by the attorney general and the secretary of the treasury.

These regulations will set forth the maximum quantity of liquor that may be prescribed at any one time, as well as the normal frequency of prescribing. The object is to prevent abuses that might arise if physicians should prescribe quantities of liquor sufficient for long periods. Anyone who misrepresents to obtain a greater supply than is needed is subject to fine and imprisonment.

Physicians will not be required to file in any government office records of the amount of liquor which their patients are suffering, as at present, but will be required to keep such records in their offices.

The prescription of alcoholic liquors is still not permitted in several states, and numerous physicians in other states have refused to take out permits. Many physicians find the prescription privilege an annoyance. These are indications that the right to prescribe liquor never has been an unmixed blessing.

Alcohol in the treatment of disease may be beneficial, useless or harmful, according to the manner in which it is used, and according to the type of case in which it is prescribed. Dr. Humphrey Rolleston has said that its main value is in an emergency, and as a temporary remedy for diminishing and occasionally to induce sleep.

Dr. Roger I. Lee has spoken of its relief as the condition of a state of artificial euphoria, or feeling of well-being.

An elderly person, for example, is convalescing from a mild cold, or pneumonia, for instance. He is told that he may have a little whisky. Where the person in good health is unaware of any feeling functions, the old person who is recovering from a minor illness is conscious of many dizzy disturbances. He is told he is depressed and miserable in mind and body, he has no appetite and does not care about things.

True, such a person may be greatly improved by the administration of a small amount of alcohol, but a small dose of alcohol in a sick person often gives him a different outlook on life.

His miseries concern him less. He is likely to be improved by the opportunity to hove in his body the will toward recovery, rather than the lackadaisical attitude mentioned.

New Eddie Cantor Film Here Sunday

Jean Calloway's Orchestra at Saenger for 3 Shows Saturday

"The Kid From Spain" with Eddie Cantor is the pop-eyed matador for laughs and a hundred dark-eyed senoritas for further excitement in a fiesta tale of Mexican bull-fighting and love-making comes to the Saenger Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Eddie Cantor and Lyda Roberti in "The Kid from Spain"

Every year a new sensation rises out of the thousands of actors who appear before the millions of unseen audiences, and this season Blase New York with the symbol Jubilation has proclaimed another Californ in the person of "Jean."

Jean Calloway has surrounded herself with thirteen of the most nationally known musicians' artists, brought together from practically every part of this vast country, and is today proving to be an absolute sensation.

The management of the Saenger has been forced to guarantee the Famous Orchestra Corporation of New York City, who are sponsoring the tour of this marvelous artist, a tremendous sum of money to make it possible for the patrons of this vicinity to be able to be entertained at the Saenger for three shows only Saturday.

Church Dismisses Mission Writer

Pearl Buck Going Back to China After Presbyterian Fight

NEW YORK.—Pearl Buck is going back to China next month with her husband, still the artist untouched by ballyhoo and bickering.

Although she has been forced to resign as a missionary because of her literary views, she has preserved her philosophical calm, which she acquired in the Eastern world.

As soon as news of her break with the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions was published, through her publishers, she sent a message that she has retracted nothing as to her beliefs, her writings or speeches—and that she will go about her business in China as usual.

"For some time," said Richard Walsh, president of the John Day Company, publishers, "Mrs. Buck has regarded herself as a novelist, not a missionary second. She was an unpaid missionary, in the first place. She taught English in China, but two or three years ago, she droped that work, too.

"This resignation will make no difference in her life in China. It is just a formality, that's all."

Pearl Buck remains high on enigma to the American public that applauded her "The Good Earth." She never has given her opinions on marriage, divorce, the younger generation and prohibition.

She wrote Mr. Walsh:

"I would like to be known not for myself, but for my books. The Chinese are very sensitive people. They take the artist as important only because of his art, are not interested in the personality of the artist."

Her devotion to the Chinese people still is the guiding interest of her life's work, she has said.

Dr. Macher Roused

PHILADELPHIA.—The Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church Tuesday was severely criticized for its failure to condemn Mrs. Pearl S. Buck in accepting her resignation as a missionary, in a statement by the Rev. Dr. J. Gresham Machen, fundamentalist chairman of the faculty of the Westminster Theological School.

"The action of the board indicated that it is quite unworthy of the confidence of the Presbyterian Church," the statement said.

Referendum Move Due Before June 8

Battle for Signatures on Petition Now Under Way in State

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Formal notice was given by the Arkansas Corporation Commission Friday that Act 280 of the 1933 legislature—amending the period for redemption of tax-forfeited lands to four years and reducing the penalty to 2 per cent—would become effective June 8 unless petitions containing the required number of signatures for a referendum on the act are filed with the secretary of state by that time.

If petitions bearing approximately 13,000 signatures of qualified electors now in circulation throughout the state, are filed by June 8, the operation of the act will be stayed and it will be voted upon at the 1934 general election.

Editorial By Alex. H. Washburn

PROSPECTIVE bank robbers, get out your pencils and figure this profit! Charles Chapman and his gang robbed the First National here of $24,000 last February. This week he was released at ElDorado under $6,000 bond for a bank robbery at Smackover.

The Smackover robbery was $4,000, one the bond was $6,000.

But why not a $24,000 bond—the amount of the Hope robbery?

Simply because it is the practice of our counties to run their law enforcement policies independent, and often in defiance, of each other.

X X X

Thus it would be possible for Chapman to put up bond in several counties, if necessary, and still be money ahead on the proceeds of his haul in this city.

It is a ridiculous situation.

Our readers remember a sharp criticism we made of the manner in which Sheriff A. D. Maxey of Van Buren county stalled off the Hempstead circuit court with respect to Chapman.

The prisoner was "ransomed" out to Union county because Sheriff Maxey didn't get any local reward for catching a criminal it was his duty to catch if humanly possible.

We grant that a reward was due. But we presume the state bankers association is "broke" like everyone else.

Because Maxey took advantage of these desperate times a sharp and resourceful bank robber is once more walking around this state.

X X X

The Chapman case illustrates our need for centralized control of law enforcement in this state.

A sheriff holding a high-priced bank robber nowadays is apt to talk like a kidnaper wanting ransom. He says, "I got him,' 'and in the next breath asks, "How much?"

This foolishness will run just long enough to disgust the people and inspire direct action.

Then we'll wipe out two-thirds of our county lines and set up a state constabulary which will keep its eye on the criminal instead of the reward.

X X X

Too many of our people take spectacular holdups with cynical amusement. "Let the insurance companies pay—that's what they're for," the cynics say.

Well, we used to believe that the cost of taxation was borne only by the rich.

When it got heavy enough, we discovered that the bigger a man's tax bill the more likely it was to be passed on to the rest of us. Finally the federal government was forced into direct taxation of commodities like gasoline, automobile tires, cosmetics, and other every-day articles.

Taxation hits everybody.

Insurance hits everybody.

The only way to keep these costs in line is to hammer eternally at self-seeking public officials who have it in their power to make or break the record of law-enforcement.

Candidates Slow to File for Vote on 18th Repealer

No Final Date, However, Until Printing of the Ballot

NO EXPENSE MONEY

Although Counties Elect Delegates, Total State Vote Binds Convention

LITTLE ROCK— (AP) —The honor of paying their own expenses to a convention here in which they will have no voice thus far has attracted few candidates for delegates to the August 1st convention to cast this state's vote for or against repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

Reports show that in not more than two or three counties have candidates for delegates in the July 18 prohibition referendum qualified through the filing of petitions with the county clerk, bearing signatures of 100 or more qualified electors of the county.

May File Any Time

There's still plenty of time left, as the act of the 1933 legislature calling the election and convention fixes no final date for filing. Thus candidates apparently may file up to the time the ballots are printed.

Although the act requires that candidates must file pledges with their petitions stating they are for or against repeal, there is no limit on the number of candidates that may file.

The candidate receiving the highest number of votes in each county, and the 12th to the convention—en pays his own expenses. The act made no provision for paying expenses of the delegates.

After they get here, they will have no voice in the convention as it is bound to cast the 75 votes as a unit either for or against the proposed Twenty-First amendment to the Constitution which would repeal the Eighteenth (prohibition) amendment.

Whether the convention votes for or against repealing the new amendment depends upon the total vote in the state cast on the question of repeal.

Although the names of the candidates and whether they are for or against repeal will appear on the ballots, the vote on these count nothing so far as eliminating what Arkansas is to do about repeal. That merely determines who gets to make the trip to the Little Rock convention.

Depends on Total Vote

What counts is the vote on the question which will appear also on the ballot in this form:

"For repeal of the 18th amendment."

"Against repeal of the 18th amendment."

After the July 18th election, the county election commissioners canvass the returns on this question and certify them to the secretary of state. He then adds the total for the state cast for repeal and the total cast against repeal.

When the convention meets and elects a chairman and secretary, the secretary of state informs the convention of the total number of votes in the entire state for and against repeal.

"Upon receipt of said certificate of the secretary of state, said convention declares the result of the vote upon a majority of the total number of votes in the entire state was cast," says the act.

"Said convention shall thereupon immediately adjourn," at adds.

Tax Strike Begun in City of Helena

Doctors and Dentists Protest $50 Levy as "Discriminatory"

HELENA, Ark—(AP)—A tax-resistance campaign has been started by a group of Helena physicians and dentists and as a result a half dozen or so have been fined for failing to pay their occupation tax.

The professional men contend the city occupation tax is "discriminatory, exorbitant and unfair" in the Blanchard and refused to pay it. The tax is $50 a year each.

Those who have been fined have announced they will appeal from the municipal court sentences to the circuit court.

They charge that the Helena occupation tax "is double the amount charged in any city or town in the state, or possibly even the United States." The professional men said they were willing to pay a "reasonable" tax.

State Contests Begin, Clarksville

Annual Literary and Track Met to Close Saturday Night

CLARKSVILLE, Ark.—(AP)—Clarksville almost was given over to high school students Friday as the annual state literary and track and field meet started with more than 1,000 contestants and visitors in attendance.

Preliminaries in the track and field meet were held Friday afternoon. Finals will be run off Saturday afternoon.

Part of the literary contests were held Friday night. The remainder will be completed Saturday. Winners will not be announced until Saturday night when cups and medals will be awarded after the orchestra contest.

Sweepstakes cups will be awarded the two schools winning the most points in the literary contests and the athletic events. Individual prizes also will be awarded. Only winners of first and second places in the 12 district meets are eligible for the state contests.

Panic Inexcusable W. S. Atkins Tells Patmos Audience

He and John P. Cox Speak on Kiwanis Good-Will Program

500 CROWD SCHOOL

Club Cancels Columbus Tour, But Will Visit DeAnn May 19

A crowd estimated at 500 people welcomed the Kiwanis club on the second visit of their goodwill trips Friday night, when the auditorium of the Patmos school building was filled to overflowing. Lester Gordan principal of the Patmos school, welcomed the visitors from Hope.

"I believe there is no need for economic depreasions in a well-ordered democracy," said W. S. Atkins in a talk on agriculture and its relation to society and government.

"We have been promised that we would have a prosperity for all our farmers, by politicians, for all the years of my life, and no doubt before then," said Mr. Atkins.

"Business and industrial conditions depend on whether the farmer can buy the things he needs, and its time we faced the facts of present-day conditions," he continued.

Concentration of Wealth

"It was under-consumption and not over-production which brought the economic distress, since farmers are producing less than in former years. When our people face the facts and exercise their duties of citizenship by becoming well-informed on questions of government, they will demand of government some plan of economics which will bring farming a greater share of the wealth of the nation, now concentrated in the hands of a few. Two per cent of our people control 60 per cent of our wealth, and this is one of the troubles of the present order."

"Many of the leaders of our nation came from just such communities as this," said Mr. Atkins, in paying tribute to the splendid school, and the attentive audience.

Cox Also Speaks

"We need character and good citizenship above all else," said John P. Cox in an inspirational address.

The Rev. Geo. F. X. Strassner was chairman. He announced the Kiwanis essay contest on the subject, "What can we do as citizens for the maintainance and progress of our government?" This contest is open to all Hempstead county pupils, outside Hope special school district, between the ages of 15 and 20, inclusive.

On May 19 the club will visit De-Ann. The engagement to Columbus for next Friday at Columbus may be cancelled because that is the date of the Hope senior class play.

At the regular meeting of the club at the New Capital hotel, plans for a divisional conference of Kiwanis at Pine Bluff was announced by the Rev. Mr. Strassner, lieutenant governor. The date is May 17. Officers and directors of the Hope club were asked to attend.

'You There Charlie?' Ananias Tells Story of Cow and 25 Calves

Here's a tale that will put Ananias in the shade!

J. M. Yarberry of New Boston, Texas, sets into The Star office Saturday. He told a weird story of a cow giving birth to 25 calves.

Twenty-four of the calves were about the size of full-grown squirrels. The 25th calf was full developed, but born dead. The 24 smaller ones lived about three hours.

The cow is owned by Carl Bartlett, who lives two miles south of New Boston. Mr. Bartlett is a neighbor of Mr. Yarberry.

Mr. Yarberry said the 24 calves were placed in alcohol for preserving and scientific purposes.

Crimm Issues His Call for Converts

"God's Remedy for Sin" Is Tabernacle Theme Friday Night

Evangelist B. B. Crimm made his first general call and invitation to the congregation Friday night. Two persons made their way to the tabernacle altar to express their desire to unite in membership with the local churches.

At the close of the revival the Rev. Mr. Crimm stated that all pastors of local churches will receive a list of names of those wishing to unite.

The subject of Friday night's sermon was, "God's Remedy for Sin!" The evangelist read his text from the third chapter of John, "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness ,so must the Son of Man be lifted up."

In reading the text the evangelist stated:

"To me this is the greatest text in the Bible. I shall never forget it the longest day I live. It was the text the preacher delivered his sermon from when I found the Lord.

"It was a great hour. I have used it many times myself. Just how many times I don't know, but if I could preach that sermon from that text that I feel in my soul, just one time, I would be willing to lie down and die.

"The new birth is a physical impossibility, but a spiritual necessity. If you don't understand it, you don't understand physical birth. Both are mysteries of God. God is behind them and with a great God, all things are possible. We accept by faith."

Arkansas Exports Greater for 1932

10½ Millions Against 8½ for 1931—Cotton Sales Jumped

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Arkansas exports—chiefly cotton—in 1932 were valued at $1,590,365 more than in 1931, the statistical division of the department of commerce announced today.

The 1932 exports were valued at $10,248,119 as compared with $8,657,745 in 1931, an increase of about 18 per cent over the previous year which accounted for chiefly by heavier foreign sales of unmanufactured cotton.

Unmanufactured cotton and linters exported last year was valued at $8,228,911 as compared with $5,146,425 in the preceding year. Linters accounted for $31,440 of the 1932 volume.

A sharp drop in the value of lumber exports was shown. The value of exports of boards, planks and scantlings last year was $540,320, compared

British Dodge U.S. Tariff Truce; Davis Presses for Reply

U. S. Envoy Instructed to Wait Until They Do Make Answer

PREMIER IS UNEASY

Tory Cabinet and Tory MacDonald Blocked by Votes in Commons

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Norman Davis, special ambassador for President Roosevelt, was instructed Saturday to remain here to press the British government for support of an immediate tariff truce, or, failing in that, a declaration of the British position.

This announcement followed Friday's developments, when the British apparently refused to endorse the tariff truce advocted by Roosevelt.

Tories Obdurate

Official secrecy prevails regarding what passed between Mr. MacDonald and his ministers around the big cabinet table at Number 10 Downing street today, but it was believed that the prime minister's sympathetic presentation of the American proposal was confronted by a stone wall of opposition from the tariff wing o the National government.

While some ministers desired to make a gesture of support for the truce, they feared to face the tariff bloc in the House of Commons, already in revolt.

Expects Quick Action

WASHINGTON.—(AP)— Secretary Hull of the Department of State said Saturday, in reply to questioning, that he hoped the essential objects and purposes of the world economic conference, to be held in London, June 12, would be dealt with within a couple of months.

Hull said he entertained this hope because he considered the great national and world emergency required prompt action at the conference assembly June 12.

The Argentine and Italian representatives, here for economic conversations preparatory to the London conference, visited the Department of State Saturday and held several talks with American officials drew to a close.

Hull said, generally speaking, he felt the outcome of the conference looked very encouraging.

Germany's representative, Dr. Schact, had luncheon with President Roosevelt Saturday, with a subsequent informal conference.

The Chinese finance minister, T. V. Soong, who arrived Saturday evening will have no engagements over the week-end, to permit him to rest.

Cotton Continues Climb; Closes 8.59

Extreme Advance of 16 Points, But Final Gain Is 5 Points

Cotton sky-rocketed on its way to 9 cents a pound at the opening Saturday morning, but fell back under the pressure of week-end profit-taking and closed with a net advance of 5 points, or 25 cents a bale.

July contracts leaped to 8.70 at the open, an extreme rise of 16 points above the previous close of 8.54.

At the low July sold down to 8.54, even with the previous close. At the closing rally swept the market upward slightly, enabling it to show a final quotation of 8.59-62.

Chapman Freed on a Bond of $6,000

Hope Robber to Face Trial on Smackover Holdup in June

EL DORADO.—(AP)—June Brashear, alias Louis Jamison, 28 was released from Tulsa, Okla. Friday and placed in jail to face charges of robbing the Smackover State Bank of approximately $6000 last January.

He is the second suspect to be arrested in connection with the robbery. Charles Chapman, one time wealthy road contractor, and self styled "depression bandit," has been charged with the robbery. It became known Friday that he has been released under $6000 bond for appearance at the June term of court.

Brashear was arrested in Claremore, Okla., after being traced to Kansas City, Texas and then into Oklahoma. He declined to discuss the charges again him. "I don't know what they are talking about," he said.

Kentucky Derby to Be Run Saturday

Ladysman Favorite, With Head Play Choice of Old Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—It's Ladysman, coupled with Pomponius and Pompeion as the Coe entry, against the field in the 59th renewal of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs Saturday at 5 p. m. C. S. T.

If these three sons of Pompey, among which Ladysman was the only standing two-year-old of 1932, are beaten, it might be any one of his or eitht others carried in the overnight entries as possible starters. It's that kind of a race.

Perhaps because he is Kentucky's choice and because every one in Kentucky knows and talks horses, Head Play of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Rose has numerous and more vehement partisans than any of the others. He is expected t obe second choice in the mutual betting.

Head Play was sold unexpectedly Friday afternoon, for a cash price of $30,000, plus a percentage of possible derby winnings, and will race in the classic in the colors of Mrs. Silas B. Mason of Richmond, Ky. The handsome chestnut colt had been entered by Mrs. William Crump of Nashville, Tenn.

The romantic background of the horse's ownership had caught the fancy of derby followers. Crump, well known for years as a rider and now a trainer, bought the colt at the Lexington yearling sales in 1931 for only $550 and turned the ownership over to his wife.

It has been estimated that England spends $300,000,000 a year on sweets. Almost 300,000 tons of candy are consumed annually.

"Go-Between" and Driver of Car Get Portion of $70,000

Buck Brothers Seized in Dramatic Rescue of Mc Math Child

PLEDGE BY FAMILY

Were to Have Given Gang 48-Hour Start—Police Jumped Them

HARWHICHPORT, Mass.—(AP)—Kenneth and Cyril Buck, brothers, the latter, one of those on the boat "Bob" which the kidnaped Peggy McMath was recovered by police Friday, was arrested here Saturday by state police.

General Needham, head of state police, announced that the brothers were under arrest. Cyril is a go-between, and Kenneth, the man in the car who wore a black mask when Mrs. McMath called and stored to her father.

The brothers were questioned for some time at their home here before the arrests were announced.

Needham said Kenneth admitted having $10,000.

Two others are being sought, Needham said. Cyril refused to tell who led the brothers were members of kidnaping gang. Needham said he believed it to be a good assumption.

$70,000 Ransom Paid

The demand was for $70,000 ransom, $10,000 of which was to go to Needham, $10000 to Cyril, and $50,000 to two other men.

Kenneth said he would have given $10,000 to Cyril refused $10,000.

Needham said no members of the McMath family was associated with the kidnaping gang. Cyril confessed that Kenneth, who has a "good head" started the plot. Needham said those facts furnished the motive.

He declared that Kenneth made a complete statement, but Cyril denied any wrong-doing.

Kenneth is 26, Cyril is 24. Cyril said he was innocent and would leave the police to his $10,000.

A Dramatic Return

HARWICHPORT, Mass.—(AP)—Later almost three days in the hands of kidnapers, Margaret ("Peggy") McMath was returned to her father at 4:30 p. m. today after the payment of a ransom of $70,000.

"First news of the child's return was made public on her arrival in Harwich, Mass., about 5 p. m. EST and 4 p. m, Hope, An Associated Press bulletin telling of her release was inserted in the last half of yesterday's city edition of The Star, and all of the mail editions.

Negotiations leading to recovery of the 10-year-old girl came through a ransom letter received early Friday night and a mysterious contact subsequently established with the abductors.

Authorities said they understood the ransom demand was in the child's own handwriting.

The men who stole the girl from the schoolroom Tuesday afternoon demanded and received a promise that they would be given a 48-hour start in their flight.

By pre-arrangement at 3 a. m. Friday, after several unsuccessful trips in good health to her father at sea aboard a boat owned by William Lee, a businessman of Harwichport, a resident of Harwichport, one a garage owner, also known to newspapers gave up their hostage, after receiving the ransom money.

The father and his associates had intended to keep the little girl at sea aboard the Lee boat until the 48 hours were up, fearing "dire threats" of what would happen if they broke their word of immunity.

But a "leak" occurred. Just before dusk Friday, Coast Guard boats were ordered in on the Lee craft and took off the child and her father. The first news of the girl's return developed when she was seen on a Coast Guard boat.

Money Withdrawn

The story of how police broke through the secrecy which the father and his friends had maintained was told Friday night by state Commissioner of Public Safety Needham.

"Last night," he said, "the Merchants National Bank of Boston appointed Captain Bligh of the state police to furnish an armed guard for the transportation of money.

"Captain Bligh sent Sergeant Delaney, armed and in plain clothes, to Harwich as a receiver of stolen money. Delaney returned to the statehouse about 1 this morning and reported to Bligh that he, in company with Mr. Bacon (president of the bank) and two other men had gone to Harwichport to the house of Mr. McMath conveying a sum of money which he believed to $70,000.

"This information was reported promptly to us at Harwichport where

Storm Toll Since March 200 Lives

Saturday Brings Alabama-South Carolina Death List to 40

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.— (AP)— Spring storms wreaking destruction from the Mississippi valley to the Atlantic seaboard left 40 known dead in their wake Saturday and raised to nearly 200 the total of lives taken by Southern tornadoes since March.

Friday's twisters killed 22 in Alabama and 18 in South Carolina.

The death toll of the South Carolina tornado reached 18 when three injured persons succumbed at an Anderson, S. C., hospital Saturday.

Torrential rains followed the storm's path, and threatened serious damage in the Mississippi delta, where rivers already were swollen. The fall of the Tallahatchie river, which has been flooding for several weeks, was checked by the deluge. Highways were awash. Three feet of water stood in sections of Water Valley, Miss.

It was the second major Southern storm this week and the fourth since the middle of March. The death toll in the series of tornadoes exceeds 170.

The National Red Cross is in charge of public health and relief workers had been sent to Helena. It was virtually demolished.

The wind passed over Anderson, S. C., and dipped at Belton, 10 miles away. Many houses were demolished and several score persons were hurt.

Following is a revised list of the dead in the tornado in Alabama:

At Helena: Carl Stober, Mrs. Walker Simmons, Helen Crim, Frances Kirkland, Miss Helen Jones, Mrs. N. D. Thomas, Virginia Foster, Orange Wilson, Bertha May Banshaw, Alfred Mullins and Mary Frances Yessick.

At Centerville and Brent: Mrs. J. C. Wright, three unidentified white persons, Mary Sanders, negro; Wilson Childers, negro; and Oscar Davidson, negro.
